Exploring the World

A short guide to places worth the journey.

Some of the best trips begin with a simple question: what is over that ridge? This guide collects a handful of landscapes that reward the effort of getting there, from alpine lakes to quiet coastlines.

Plan around the light. Early mornings and late afternoons soften every view, and the weather is usually calmer. Pack for changing conditions, carry water, and leave no trace.

Figure 1. Dawn over the lake.

Take your time. The best moments are rarely on the schedule: a clearing in the clouds, a trail that opens onto a valley, a lake so still it holds the whole sky.